TUESDAY, Aug. 29. The news that the Russian and Japanese commissioners at Portsmouth had agreed upon terms of peace caused, of course, today a general rise in security prices. Provious to this announcement the stock market had during the day been of dull and uncertain character, but with a manifest tendency toward heaviness. A few stocks like Canadian Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville had been strong, but there was continuous even if moderate liquidation in other quarters, and the market plainly acted like one that needed some fresh spurring in order to stimulate it into activity. Sentiment had been in a way prepared for the pleasant developments of the afternoon by the definite statement in the morning newspapers that new propositions, doubtless in the nature of concessions, were to be made by the Japanese envoys at to-day's session of the peace conference; but it was feared that these propositions would be found to be after all only old ones in a new form, and that the day, might witness a final breaking off of the peace negotiations. While the peace terms were not fully known in Wall Street up to the close of business hours, it seemed to be clear that Japan had totally waived her claim for an indemnity and was to receive only in the shape of a cash payment com-pensation for her care of the Russian prisoners; the remaining phases of the treaty being those concerning which the minds of both parties had long been in virtual accord. Whatever the terms, Wall Street only knew that peace had been concluded and that the event was bound to be greeted with a sense of relief in financial circles around the world. In the buying of stocks that followed nearly every active security on the list was favor-ably affected, but although gains of more than a point in many of these stocks were shown at the close, final prices being almost invariably at the highest, the upward movement did not appear to be one governed by extreme enthusiasm. The common impression seemed to be that the foreign markets would be more directly affected by the cessation of the war than would our own and that the influence exerted upon prices here would be chiefly of a sympathetic character. A large share of the purchases this afternoon therefore were, aside from those made to cover contracts for the decline, for the account of brokers in the arbitrage business and others who expected to have an early opportunity of reselling upon the foreign bourses. Naturally the peace news was the only news talked about to-day in the financial district. Other developments included a further rise in the price of copper metal; a declaration of the American Sugar Refining Company's quarterly dividends at the regular rate—a rumor having prevailed that this rate was likely to be advanced; the report of the Associated Merchants' Company for the six months ended on Aug. 1 of an increase in surplus of $214,649; the publication of the Government's weekly crop report, which told of a generally improved condition of all crops and caused weakness in every agricultural market, including cotton; news of the purchase by the United States Steel Corporation of a further quantity of pig iron from outside producers, and announcement of another large shipment of money from the banks here to Chicago, making $3,000,000 that has been sent to that city for crop moving purposes in the current month. The banks have lost thus far to the Sub-Treasury during the week, almost entirely on account of felt by financiers no less than humanitarians upon the conclusion of such a disastrous in Manchuria during the last eighteen months, the wisdom may be urged of a calm consideration of all the possibilities and the world's financial markets. The war between Russia and Japan has been brought to an end by the fact that both nations were approaching the point of financial exhaustion, and it has been the profound appreciation of this by the world's leading financiers that has led to the confidence continually expressed by them that the Portsmouth conference would end in the way it has done. Now that peace has been declared, or practically so, the march of both nations toward bankruptcy has been stopped. But the vast losses of the war have been in no whit repaired, and the duty and necessity which now lie upon both countries is to bring back once more, if possible, the wealth that has been de stroyed. This means that there must be seen in both nations in the near future the reverse of that process of credit inflation which has so long been witnessed there, a reign of economy instead of the expenditure of borrowed money, a hiving and saving of every natural resource instead of the utilization of these upon an extravagant scale both nations will unquestionably at no very distant period apply for assistance to the world's financial markets, and the call will just as unquestionably be heeded; for those who lend the money will feel that the funds furnished will not be thrown away in a wasteful contest of arms and the financial salvation of the countries concerned. As the money thus loaned will not be needed in foreign countries for the purchase of war supplies and similar materials, the net result of all this must be in due course to reduce the large financial balances that Russia and Japan have recently maintained in Europe and this country and to make money here and in Europe relatively scarcer than it has been. In the case of Japan, moreover, the country is compelled to forego the receipt of the and which would have been somewhat more than welcome to it in its strained financial condition. Desirable as the result attained at Portsmouth yesterday is, when adjudged by every high standard of statesmanship and finance, its influences and bearings should be thoughtfully and not hastily studied by the speculator for the crop moving drain, $3,389,000. After the close of the market the statement of the operations of the various Reading companies for July was made public, show-ng an increase in surplus for July of but $69,017. The statement was somewhat disappointing, the feature of the operations of the company during the month appearing to be a decrease of nearly $500,000 in the gross receipts of the Reading Coal and Iron Company.
